

Coronavirus Update

18th March 2020

Like you, we at Specialisterne Australia, are closely monitoring and responding to the unfolding situation around the Coronavirus Pandemic.

At the forefront of our minds is the safety and wellbeing of our staff, our clients, our candidates, and of course our wider community.

Our first priority is to limit the risk to all our stakeholders, while continuing to deliver business services to our clients to our usual high standard.

Currently, we have suspended all face-to-face delivery of our programs and ongoing business enablement support and have put alternative measures in place to ensure we can continue to meet our deliverables and achieve our intended outcomes.

Our Training and Assessment Programs will be conducted via a distance education model with virtual classrooms, video conferencing, webinars and live chat. Our ongoing business enablement will also be facilitated via video conferencing, webinars, phone and email.

Our team is well placed to support our clients and candidates using a range of online and virtual tools.

We are fully committed to continuing to work with our clients, candidates and community in an efficient, adaptable and sociably responsible manner to ensure we continue to provide high quality and professional services to our clients and stakeholders during this unprecedented situation.

Other interim contingency safety measures we have implemented include:

- All our staff to work from home (staff are also encouraged to self-isolate)
- Any meetings or presentations be held virtually instead of face-to-face
- Avoid use of public transport
- Essential travel only
- No air-travel

In the meantime, we hope that you, your colleagues, families and community stay safe and well.

If you have any questions or concerns, please feel free to contact us as needed.

Julie Robertson (CEO)